The Indictments Against Outlaws Are Not to Be Pigeon-Holed.

Those of the indicted dive-keepers who are being to their sons the four delinquents that they are not to be prosecuted are doomed to utter disappointment.

There are no pigeon-holes in the District-Attorney's office wherein the necessary declarations of crime made against Mr. Tom Gould and his fellow outlaws by the Grand Jury can be lost.

Some of the dive-keepers are liable to be wearing striped uniforms, in company with Mr. Billy McGLORY on Blackwell's Island, before they have had a chance to accumulate on the neatly folded papers which accuse Mr. Carey Welch and the others of his ilk whose wickedness has been disclosed by THE EVENING WORLD's searchlight.

"I hope to begin the trial of the dive cases in a week or two," said District-Attorney Nicol today. "They can hardly be tried sooner, because we are now busy getting rid of murder and assault cases, which take up a great deal of time."

"The Harris case will probably occupy the attention of the Recorder's Court for two weeks. I understand that ten days will be required to try the McGLORY assault case, one part of General Sessions clear for the disposition of other cases."

"The calendars are filled and other cases are accumulating very fast, which condition of affairs demonstrates the necessity for additional criminal courts."

"The Court of Oyer and Terminer has been so practical use in clearing the calendars, nor will it be, for by the retirement of Judge Davis, the Supreme Court Bench in this county has been reduced by one in the number of judges, and there are now hardly enough judges for the general term and circuits, without holding a criminal part of the Court."

Mr. Nicol said that he had not yet determined which of the dive-keeping outlaws he would try first. Mr. Tom Gould may be the first, if it is possible to get him out of the Sullivan street "Black and Tan," or "House" John Kelly, or "Pickwick" Scitener. These and seven others are slated for trial.

"They will not be kept long in suspense on this case, for, in order, for each will have his day in court, and that speedily."

Assistant District-Attorney Lynn has all the cases under his direction and is thoroughly conversant with the present convincing evidence of criminality in each.

TAKEN IN OUT OF THE COLD.

Habitues of the Closed Dives Plead to Buttner and Stajer's.

There was a slightly increased attendance of females last night in the "concert halls," kept by Mr. Louis Stajer, at 255, and Mr. Ignatz Buttner, at 204 Bowery. The gold, jewelry and made it impossible for them to stand long in the streets, and with most of their former usual haunts closed against them they eagerly rushed to the "orphan" and to Stajer's.

Most of the creatures were glad enough to get warm without finding fault at the scarcity of victims, although there was plenty of room for "complaint" in this respect.

Because of the scarcity of lambs the flocks in Mr. Ignatz Buttner's den did not inausurably find "business" last night. In order that the silver stream of shekels may flow uninterrupted into Mr. Buttner's yawning coffers it is necessary that his den should be liberally patronized by men the weight of whose pocketbooks is greater than that of their brains. Ken of this sort were conspicuous last night for their absence.

At one time the women present outnumbered the men six to one, and the few males who were present were not over-zealous in acquiring illicit inspiration. The women seldom, if ever, "blush" at the sight of them—and consequently there was a stagnation of business at the bar.

THE STOVE DID A BIG BUSINESS.

As the men began to drop out one by one and have arrived to take their places, the females shivered and closed in about the big stove, which was the only part of the establishment that was in any way attractive during the evening.

Things had a little more push to them over at Stajer's, but even here the females far outnumbered the men in the audience. Under his "ladies' entrance" sign Stajer still kept the placard reading:

No Ladies Admitted Without Gentleman Escort.

It was plainly a bluff, as was indicated by the actions of several "ladies" of the bowery, who gazed intently at the sign for a few moments and then went in as if nothing had happened.

Neither did anything happen. Stajer knows better than to keep out those "ladies" whether with escorts or not, for they and they alone are the attractions of his den. Without them his business would be as dead as that of McGUIRK next door.

Even should a woman be debauched from entering Stajer's alone, she could easily pick up an "escort" on the street, and once inside it is amusing to note how quickly the "ladies" shake their "escorts" unless the latter are well provided with money.

Several saloons entered Stajer's last night, and were the honored "guests" of the evening. They were man-of-war-men, and like all jolly tars on shore for a lark, were well supplied with money, which they spent freely.

JACK TACK LURED BY HARPERS.

In the professional vernacular, a sailor is a "mark" for the female crooks and their male accomplices. So long as Jack sticks to his shipmates he runs little risk of being sandbagged and robbed. The perpetrators of such deeds prefer that their victim shall be a "land" man, and who are heartily glad to see the risk of enticing him away from his sailor companions is left to the female crooks.

Such women are plentiful in Stajer's, and the "orphan." If they fail to secure a victim for their accomplices they rarely let him get out of their own clutches, and while Jack may escape with a whole head his pocket is sure to be picked and his pockets and his watch and other valuables also disappear.

Two Jack tars entered Stajer's last night shortly before 11 o'clock. They had not been seated at a table long before two harpies seated them, and leaving the men they left the place together.

Only police court history can tell whether these jolly tars met with deception and harm. If they did not it was their good luck; if they did it was but another incident in the long list of crimes, the conspiracy for which is plotted and the victims secured in just such places as Stajer's and the "orphan."

THEIR DENS STILL CLOSED.

"The Evening World's" Crusade Has Settled Most of the Outlaws.

The prospect of having their licenses revoked when the Board of Excise receives the police reports on their dens next Monday has cast a chill over the outlaws of New York.

So intense a degree of trepidation had been obtained on Sixth avenue last night that even the front windows of Mr. "Honest" John Kelly's former palace at 105, at Thirty-first street, were closed, and the entrance of the place was guarded by a line of men that not even the heated expressions of opinions on THE EVENING WORLD's crusade, given inside, could melt in the least degree.

The assignment-room in the rear was darker and colder than usual, while a similar state of affairs prevailed at Mr. Tom Gould's resort at 128 Sixth avenue and Mr. Daniel Scribner's at 226 Sixth and Broadway.

There was little more life visible in Mr. John Wulfer's "Cathedral" at 72 University place, Mr. Jim Sullivan's "Fairy's Hotel" at 78 Third avenue, Mr. John J. Murphy's "Metropolitan" at 34 Bond street, or Mr. Frank Stevenson's at 78 West Third street. At these places the back rooms were dark and unoccupied.

As he has done for many nights in succession, Mr. Simon Buttner, last night again kept the dive annex of his den at 204 Bowery, tightly closed. This course was also followed by Mr. Chas. Smith, Mr. John H. McGuirk, the keeper of the Lenox, Mr. John J. McAllister and Mr. Paul McCarthy, all of whose back rooms 107, 253, 271, 299 and 327 respectively, were dark and deserted.

Mr. Louis Walters again had his box-like den at 285 Bowery closed tight as a drum, and must be numbered with the retired outlaws, Mr. Tom Gould, Mr. Carey Welch, Mr. Alfred Davis, Mr. Frank Stevenson and Mr. August Gould.

Mr. Davis' "Excise Exchange," at 339 Bowery, is still "to let." As to emphasize matters, the agent of the property yesterday faced another "to let" card in the other window of the deserted dive.

SEVEN CRUSHED.

Workmen Buried Under a Falling Gas Retort.

All Taken Out Alive, but Some of Them May Die.

Accident at the Consolidated Gas Works, West Forty-fifth Street.

A shocking accident occurred a few minutes after 10 o'clock this morning in the works of the Consolidated Gas Company at the foot of West Forty-fifth street.

Four retorts and part of the masonry of the old retort house suddenly caved in, while a large gang of laborers was at work there, and seven of them were buried in the ruins.

They were all dug out of the debris, bruised and crushed, and several of them are so badly injured that it is thought they cannot live. All were taken out alive.

THE INJURED MEN.

Following is a list of the injured:

JOHN CALLAHAN, fifty-five years old, of 503 Eleventh avenue. Taken to the Presbyterian Hospital.

JAMES CANEY, fifty years old, so badly hurt that he could not state his residence. Taken to Bellevue Hospital.

JOHN GALEY, aged fifty years, of 215 West Sixty-first street, taken home.

PATRICK FANNING, twenty-four years old, of 510 West Forty-ninth street, taken home, severely bruised about the body and head.

MATTHEW McGUIRK, fifty years old, of 454 West Fifty-second street. Taken to Roosevelt Hospital.

EDWARD McGUIRK, fifty years old, of 410 West Fifty-sixth street. Taken to Roosevelt Hospital.

JAMES McGUIRK, forty years old, of 410 West Fifty-sixth street. Taken to Roosevelt Hospital.

ALL CRUSHED AND CRUSHED.

The four men were terribly bruised and crushed, and many of them are believed to have sustained serious internal injuries.

The two men, Caney and Fanning, are the most seriously injured. Caney is severely bruised about the head, and it is feared his skull is fractured. Fanning is very badly bruised, and has a compound fracture of the left leg.

The old retort house, the Consolidated Gas Company stands at the corner of Forty-fifth street and Eleventh avenue. It contained eleven retorts, which are constructed of heavy masonry and are each about ten feet in height.

THANKS DOWN THE OLD RETORTS.

They were built about twelve years ago. For the past three weeks a large gang of laborers, numbering about seventy-five men, has been engaged in tearing down these old retorts for the purpose of replacing them with new ones.

They were employed by the contractors, John B. and D. E. O'Brien, and the work was being done under the supervision of Capt. Crowell, of the Gas Company's works.

Seven of the retorts had already been demolished. The men were at work this morning with their picks and crowbars, hacking away at the solid masonry, when all at once there was a frightful crash.

BURIED UNDER FALLING BRICKS.

The entire excavation was filled with clouds of dust and loud screams came from the men who were at work there. They rushed out, covered with dust, into the street.

When the first excitement was over it was found that four of the old retorts had collapsed, and that a part of the wall of the building had fallen.

It was evident that several men had been buried in the ruins, but exactly how many could not be ascertained.

The workmen who had escaped at once jumped into the ruins and began to dig for their companions, whose agonizing cries for assistance could be heard by those who were trying to rescue them.

STRENGTHENED WHEN TAKEN OUT.

In a few minutes several were taken out, but they were so badly injured that they could not speak at first. Within an hour all seven of the men who had been buried in the crash had been taken out and sent either to their homes or to the hospitals.

THE ACCIDENT CREATED A TREMENDOUS EXCITEMENT in the neighborhood, where most of the laborers employed in the works lived, and the rumor being spread that twenty or thirty people had been killed by the falling walls, the wives and families of the laborers flocked to the spot in the wildest state of excitement.

AMBUANCES SUMMONED.

As soon as the crash had been heard a man who was passing by at the time ran up to Police-man Hackett, who was several blocks away on Eleventh avenue, and told him what had happened.

He then ran into Hoffman's Brewery at Forty-sixth street and Eleventh avenue and telephoned to Roosevelt, the Consolidated Gas and Bellevue Hospitals for ambulances.

Five ambulances immediately responded and they were all needed.

Officer Hackett ran to the station and reported the accident. Sgt. Boyle sent out at once all the reserves, and the policemen helped the laborers to clear away the debris and pass by at the time ran up to Police-

WALL ST. STOCK REPORTS.

The Market Opened Stronger and Prices Moved Up.

Pacific Reports on the Chilean Situation Helped Matters.

During the Late Trading the Bears Had an Inning.

WALL STREET, WEDNESDAY, JAN. 21.—The bulls held control of the market again this morning. At the top notch the improvement was equal to a 1 1/2 per cent. Chesapeake and Ohio leading.

The general list was favorably influenced by the pacific accounts about the Chilean matter and by a reiteration of the reports that the anger of Gould towards the Western Traffic Association has been appeased.

After midday the market reacted under selling sales.

The Kansas and Texas Company announces the payment of the February coupons on the second mortgage income bonds.

The December net earnings of the East Tennessee were $209,472, a decrease of $60,770, and for the six months, $1,202,781, a decrease of $27,570.

The leading financial institutions are offering shares of money at 2 per cent. One large concern had $4,000,000 and could not lend it yesterday.

The sterling exchange market was stronger, nominal rates having been advanced to 4 1/2 and 4 3/4 by the leading drawers.

Sixty-day bills were higher on the reduction in the bank of England rate of discount. All classes of bills are scarce.

A rumor that Secretary Blaine was seriously ill, the cut in rail prices and reports of fires in Chicago and lack of water there gave the bears plenty of ammunition, and they hammered the market early in the afternoon.

Prices were forced down to 1 1/2 per cent. Lackawanna was conspicuously strong, and on heavy purchases the stock moved up slightly from 139 1/2 to 140 1/2. And by 8 o'clock the market was again on the rise.

Hogues started the rise by purchases of 25,000 shares. The rise in Lackawanna had a stimulating influence on the general list, which closed strong.

EXTRA MILLION GONE.

Confagration in the Tiffany Block on Union Square.

Brentano's Big Stationery and Book Store Guttled.

Tiffany's and Mrs. Lynch's Jewelry Stores Imperilled.

Schneider & Campbell's Bric-a-Brac and Art Rooms Destroyed.

Half the City's Fire Force Trying to Save the Block.

Five Alarms, Twenty-five Engines and a Great Force of Police.

The flames broke out in the basement or subcellar of No. 7 and 9 Union square, which is occupied by Schneider, Campbell & Co., manufacturers of gas fixtures, clocks, bric-a-brac and artistic bronzes, whose sales-rooms are on the ground floor.

No. 7 Union square is occupied by Brentano, the well known bookseller and stationer.

Jeweler O. R. W. Worms also occupied part of the ground floor.

It was said that the fire started among some packing material away back in the basement, where it seemed to be burning furiously, for it made a dense smoke which penetrated every part of the building and quickly drove out all the tenants.

The location of the fire was very difficult for the firemen to get at, and their efforts seemed to have no effect in checking the headway of the flames.

TWO FLOORS OF FLAME.

The building has a frontage of about 75 feet on Union square and extends back into the block for nearly 175 feet.

There it forms an "L" and comes out at No. 20 East Fifteenth street. It is of brick, with a light brown-stone front, and had a uniform height of five stories, on both Broadway and Fifteenth street sides.

The other occupants of the building are Louis Huetim, importer of millinery curus, on the second floor; Charles Bentley, manufacturer of decorative needle work, on the third floor; and Samuel Green, importer and dealer in dress trimmings, on the fourth floor. The top floor is vacant.

As the flames started the smoke burst at the same time from the cellar grates on Union square and in a Fifteenth street.

The centre of the fire seemed to be nearer the Fifteenth street end; as nearly as the firemen could locate it it was right in the angle of the "L" already described.

The smoke was dense and poured out in such volumes that the men were not able to get a single stream upon the flames, though water was poured into the cellar from both ends of the building in the hope of drowning out the fire.

BRENTANO'S GONE.

An attempt was made to save anything in Brentano's store, where the stock of books and pictures and bric-a-brac is valued at $100,000.

During the first half hour after the fire broke out no flames appeared above the basement.

Then it was discovered that the fire was creeping upward in the rear and was rapidly spreading to the top of the building.

Several lines of hose were taken through the stores in Fourteenth street and the iron shutters which were bursting with the heat were forced open with long iron crowbars.

THE WORK WAS FRUITLESS.

By this time the fire had been sent out and twenty-five fire engines and four hook and ladder companies were on the ground.

Chief Bonner was in charge, and among his assistants on hand were Chief Bresnan, of the Fifth; Fisher, of the Eighth; Sullivan, of the Ninth; and the Fourth, and Campbell, of the Seventh Battalion.

The burning building completely surrounded the great store of Tiffany & Co. at Union square and Fifteenth street. When it was found that the flames were making headway machinery was sent for the safety of the big silverware and jewelry store.

The iron shutters were all hauled down and securely fastened. While the entire force of employees was left in readiness to remove the valuable goods and jewelry in case matters came to the worst.

Supt. Murray ordered out all the reserves of fire precincts, and the fire lines were extended to the edge of the park in order to keep the firemen sufficient room in which to work.

Several Fire Commissioners, Commissioner

Meas. of the Board of Electrical Control, and other city officers were on hand.

At 1:30 o'clock the fire had broken out in the three upper stories of the burning building, and efforts to check it seemed to be of little avail.

The contents of Brentano's store and the salesroom of Schneider, Campbell & Co. were entirely destroyed, and the stock of the tenants on the upper floor will probably be a total loss.

There seemed to be danger that the flames would spread to Tiffany's and the Lincoln Building.

Several lines of hose had been taken up to the roof of the Tiffany Building, and every adjoining street was crowded with the police and hard work to manage them.

The bursting out of the flames in the rear also threatened several of the smaller buildings on Fourteenth street, adjoining the Lincoln Building.

The confagration caused a big sensation in the uptown business district. The crowds which gathered in Union square and the adjoining streets were great, and the police had hard work to manage them.

All travel on the surface lines on Broadway and Fourteenth street was blocked completely, and the streets for blocks all around were filled with the black smoke from the puffing steam engines.

ESTIMATE OF THE LOSSES.

At 1:30 insurance experts estimated the losses as follows:

Schneider, Campbell & Co., $235,000.

O. R. W. Worms, $40,000.

Brentano Bros., $200,000.

Louis Huetim, $300,000.

C. H. Bentley & Sons, $60,000.

Samuel Green & Co., $50,000.

Van Buren estate, owner of the buildings, $120,000.

The six-story building adjoining Schneider, Campbell & Co's, on East Fifteenth street, also suffered terribly.

The latter building is occupied by three firms—Davis, Heit & Alexander, mantel and fire-places; Huetim & Co., bric-a-brac, and A. J. McInch & Co., feathers and down. This building includes Nos. 18, 19 and 20.

The Lincoln Building, above referred to, is occupied as follows:

First floor, Mrs. Lynch, diamonds.

Second floor, E. S. White, dental manufacturer.

Third floor, New York Life Insurance Company.

Fourth floor, Anderson Pressed Brick Company.

Fifth floor, Horace L. Hotchkiss & Co., brokers, and Carman & Cur, brokers.

The sixth, seventh and eighth floors are occupied as offices by two export houses.

LINCOLN BUILDING ALARMS.

The flames communicated to the Lincoln Building at 1:30 o'clock and burned their way into the fifth floor. At this time Mr. Lynch, the diamond dealer, now on the ground floor of the Lincoln Building, began to remove her valuables to a place of safety.

At 2 o'clock the Lincoln Building was completely gutted.

Two explosions, supposed to be caused by escaping gas occurred in the Schneider, Campbell & Co. store.

The occupants of the Lincoln Building offices began to desert their apartments at 1:30 o'clock and they hurried downstairs, with their arms laden with books and papers and most of them dripping wet from the streams thrown into the building.

A FIREMAN INJURED.

Fireman Thomas Burke, of engine 14, fell off the ladder on the way to the fire at Fifteenth street and Fifth avenue and was seriously injured.

ANOTHER ORTHUR.

At 1:35 the fire burst out with renewed energy, the flames enveloping the entire
